To ब्रह्मांड[1]

Aryan Singhal

absence \ only thought remains \ circling itself what is left as small \ as tiny as a grain of sand a grain of sand lost \ lost in millions \ millions identical to it for what is a grain of sand to the Universe the Universe with infinite galaxies \ infinite stars \ infinite grains \ all unique none recognized gone like a silent hush of wind flowing through the sky \ brushing past echoes \ carrying their chatter in its flow the Universe knowing everything controlling everything governing with its arm with its unmerciful gavel its gavel silencing the most desperate decades of memories \ a lifetime's worth of experiences the laughing \ the crying \ the gazing in awe at everything the world has to offer in an instant empty hollow like a screen blank

a shell cold yearning for the companion \ the piece that made it whole the Universe is patient the Universe will decide the Universe knows when and when

when the sand wades into the welcoming ocean when the wind fades into the neverending world when the song of life lingers lingers on the final note \ the

---

[1] Brahmāṇḍa (literally "cosmic egg") represents the Universe and everything in it.

exhale out the rest
the calm the peace

they will embrace the Universe and the Universe will embrace them and they will sleep forever finally free